

The Sun in the Morning

'The Sun in the Morning'. The oldest song on the album, written summer '95, Camden Road. Title taken from an old Carol book. You can tell by its orthodox structure that it started as a song for another artist. But it soon became a Flamingoes/John Barry/ Beatles '65 ballad with a Motown chop and no strings. Painstakingly recreated from the demo - especially Adrian's shimmering tremelo - this version is faster, crisper, gotta bit more intent. As with the demo that's me taking the guitar solo.

James.

Expect Flamingoes III sometime in 2016 (only joking).
